MOOD: 😊 happy

MUSIC: My Morning Jacket - Golden

I love the fact that the stand mixer makes deciding to throw together cinnamon rolls (<https://www.livejournal.com/away?to=http%3A//www.foodnetwork.com/recipes/alton-brown/overnight-cinnamon-rolls-recipe/index.html>) to rise overnight for tomorrow's breakfast a trivial task.

Also, I just had an absolute stroke of genius. Eggs Benedict made over buttermilk biscuits. Thank you, I'm here all week.

Think Mom and Dad would understand if I stopped by your place for breakfast on the way to work? Because it's...so not on the way to work.

You're working tomorrow? You know your wife is going to have an affair if you keep this up.

How about if I bring you some? I'll probably get snared in the gravity well, but at least we'll have rolls. And each other. (They're even whole wheat)

I have to log in from a secure location to get at the damn files on the study-in-progress. Which I didn't finish with today because I wanted to go home and have a Sherlock marathon with my (eeee I love saying it!) wife. So tomorrow morning, I paaaaaay.

But tomorrow afternoon I want to go ice skating. Want to come? T's gonna show me up, and I need help looking scornful and superior and claiming I'm not jealous.

Oh, well, In that case, sure. And I will bring rolls for you AND T.

Oh, you'll appreciate this.

As I was locking everything away and preparing to go home tonight, Dad came out of his office.

"Finished it?" he said.

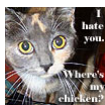

"I could stay 'til midnight and finish it," I told him, "or I could come back tomorrow."

"I'm still here."

"You're not married."

He looked grave and wise--you know, like he does--and shook his head. "I'm not married any more. The distinction is important."

And he went back into his office, but not before I thought I saw just a little teeny corner of a smile-like object. I'd have laughed out loud, but obviously he wanted the illusion preserved. *g*

That is Dad's way of saying, "Go home."

*peals of laughter* (even though I don't know your boss (or you guys, beyond online, actually) I can see someone saying this, with that mostly buried, tiny bit of self-laughter)

I myself am planning to start brioche tomorrow, as well as Alton Brown's coq au vin, both for Sunday. I love weekends. :)

You guys who flaunt their ownership of stand mixers... Cinnamon rolls sound really good. So does brioche, actually. And one of these months I *will* get a brioche pan/mold. (Normally, I make individual ones, in my muffin tins.

-g, hungry again, and I just ate...

Bitty baby brioche! (With their little hats!)

Okay, if I'm going to deliver baked goods, I'd better get off the intarwebs...

Oh my god, that sounds beautiful.

Also, I haven't visited your blog in ages. Shame on me.
